What are the guidelines for special characters in searches?

- The use of special characters in party name searches is limited to & and to - (hyphen) if part of a business name.
- Searching with any special character such as #, /, or @ will result in an error message
- Special characters other than & have been eliminated from party names. Example: Searching for name "20/20 Eye Care" can now be search as "20 20 Eye Care."
- Names with the fraction ½ can be searched using .5. Example: Searching for name "115 ½ South St Business" can now be searched by "115.5 South St Business."
- The system will automatically remove any leading or trailing spaces from the party name fields
- Punctuation has been removed. Example: Searching for name "John J. Doe" can be searched using "John J Doe."
- The special character * can be used as a wildcard.
- Search criteria entered will remain on the search results page.

Can I search without knowing a case number or party name?

A full or partial party name or case number is required for a search. If you do not know the full name or case number, you may enter at least three characters and the wildcard (). For example: Smi, Joh*, or 2016-C-* or 2016*. You may further filter your search parameters by selecting one or more case types, choosing active/inactive/both cases, and setting a date range. Select Clear Form to reset your search parameters.

Troubleshooting

Why do I only see the first page of an image?

Images opened on the Odyssey Public Access site open automatically in whichever program is set as the default image viewer for TIF.

Images opened from Odyssey Public Access site work best when viewed using the programs Windows Photo Viewer, Microsoft Office Document Imaging or Windows Picture and Fax Viewer. Each of these programs will allow you to scroll through all of the pages of the document and will also allow you to print.

Many PC's default image viewing through Microsoft Office Picture Manager. What we have experienced through Odyssey Public Access site is that the image will open, but only the first page will display.

You can change the program which opens the Public Access images by following these steps:

- 1) Search for a case on the Public Access site
- 2) On the case, click on the blue image hyperlink that you wish to view. This will take you to the images page.
- 3) For your selected event, right-click on the image hyperlink
- 4) Select "Save Target As" or "Save Target"
- 5) Save in "Desktop." Usually this is the default selection. If not, you may select "Desktop" from the drop-down menu. The File name will default as a "Document Fragment" with a file type of TIF. You may keep the defaulted file name or change it. Keep the default file type of TIF.
- 6) Click "Save"
- 7) The image will be saved as an icon on your Desktop
- 8) If a window remains on your screen showing "Download complete," (Windows 7) or asking you to open (Windows 10) click the "close" button or the "x."
- 9) Minimize all open programs so that you can access your Desktop
- 10) Find the image icon on your Desktop. The name of the icon will be the "Document Fragment" default or whatever name you provided and will look like a piece of paper or scanned image
- 11) Right-click on this image and select "Open With"
- 12) Select "Choose Program" (Windows 7) or "Choose another app" (Windows 10)
- 13) You should be given a list of Recommended Programs/Apps. Under that list, if available, choose "Windows Photo Viewer," "Microsoft Office Document Imaging," or "Windows Picture and Fax Viewer." If you do not have one of these, try one of the other programs available to you.
- 14) When you have found the program that is working as you'd like, check off the box which states "Always use this program" (Windows 7) or "Always use this app to open .tif files" (Windows 10)
- 15) Click "Apply" and then "Save"
- 16) Double-click on the icon to open. You should now be able to see all pages of the document and also have printing options.
